DAY ONE SOCIAL STORIES™ 10.1

This hands-on workshop uses lecture, demonstration, discussion, activities and practice of new skills to teach the elements of the social understanding interventions developed by Carol Gray. Most notably, participants will be trained in Social Stories™ 10.1, the first major revision of (the previous) Social Stories™ 10.0. The Social Stories™ 10.1 training has many new features, including a more detailed rationale, discussion of Social Story™ research and evidence-based practice, the introduction of Story templates, the positive past tense, Sentences that Coach, and an expanded emphasis on gathering information for a Social Story™, Story format, and emotional and social safety. By the close of this exciting, fun, and fast paced workshop, participants will leave with an updated and more detailed understanding of Social Stories™ Concepts and skills will be applicable for those working with individuals ages 2-adult.

DAY TWO: Taming the Social Context Jungle, Teaching Individuals with ASD to Effectively “Read” and Respond to Social Context

Workshop Description: It is well documented by research and practice that individuals with autism spectrum disorders (ASD) have difficulty “reading” and responding to the dynamic array of social interactions that surround them each day. To others, the responses of an individual with ASD may seem “out of context” or “inappropriate”. The ability to gain meaning from social context is highly complex, yet taken for granted by typical peers, parents, and professionals. They are able to quickly and accurately derive meaning from a simultaneous consideration of the multitude of social cues that lie within spoken words, pragmatics, and context. This presentation breaks new instructional ground, providing a working definition of social context that supports effective intervention, and leads to practical, inexpensive, instructional strategies. This is a lively, activity based workshop, with time for participants to discuss ideas and apply them to the specific challenges of the individuals in their care.
